

1 The tlig feature

In `TEX` it is still common to use two keyboard dashes to obtain an en-dash. An en-dash is used to indicate a number range, e.g., 1785–1906.

In `TEX` it is still common to use three keyboard dashes to obtain an em-dash. An em-dash is used to indicate a prominent parenthesis—in modern usage the en-dash is becoming more popular for this task—as well as between the end of an epigraph and its author.

In `CONTEXT` there is a dedicated control sequence for the en-dash. An en-dash is used to indicate a number range, e.g., 1785–1906.

In `CONTEXT` there is a dedicated control sequence to obtain an em-dash. An em-dash is used to indicate a prominent parenthesis—in modern usage the en-dash is becoming more popular for this task—as well as between the end of an epigraph and its author.